

I recently completed my fall series of community conversation meetings. Nearly 150 Glendale citizens joined me for the three meetings as we discussed important issues that will impact Glendale now and into the future. Those who attended the meetings were given the opportunity to enter topics of interest when they signed up. Although each meeting had its own focus, several topics remained the most popular among each location. These topics included the budget, the future of the Jobing.com Arena, and the application by the Tohono O’odham Nation to establish a sovereign nation within our city limits.

I designed Community Conversations for you, our Glendale citizens, to share your questions and opinions with your neighbors and me. At these meetings, we are able to share information and have open discussions about things that are taking place in our city. I left each meetings with a clear understanding of what the attendees feel is most important at this point in time, and I believe that the attendees left with more information and understanding about city efforts to address our most current issues, projects and policies.

I have created a new page on my website in order to share the printed information that I made available for our citizens at the meetings. (Click Here) to find more information about the meetings and to read up on issues that are important to our city. I hope that you enjoy reviewing the information and it gives you better insight into some of the issues. Stay tuned to this new webpage and my weekly bulletins for information about upcoming Community Conversation meetings.

Bulletins”. Please contact me at (623) 930-2260 or mayorscruggs@glendaleaz.com, if you have any comments or questions. I strive to provide the most timely information and best possible service to you, the citizens of Glendale. I sincerely appreciate your feedback.